

Contents

Part I Analysis and Descriptive Explication

Overall Objectives, Structure and Possible Audiences	3
1 Introduction	3
2 Overview	14
3 Structure of This Study and Its Possible Audiences	30
References	34
Legal Definitions and a Short Case Study	37
1 Introduction	37
2 Legal Definitions	38
3 Case Example: Hate Crime on a Railway Station?	42
References	51
Superimposing a Problematic Objectivism	53
1 Introduction	53
2 Objectivism as a Matter of Fact Approach to Hate Crime Issues with Scientific Aspirations	57
3 The Underlying Presuppositions of Objectivism Itself	63
4 Objectivism Encourages Positivist Forms of Hate Crime Research	82
References	87
The Natural Attitude's Objectivism as a Type of Closure	89
1 Introduction	89
2 The Characteristics of Closure	90
3 Closure as Self-Fulfilling	94
4 Closure as a Blueprint for Prejudice	96
5 Closure as Exclusion(s)	100
6 Restoring a Sense of What Is Excluded	104
7 Husserlian Responses to Closure	106
8 Closure Through Exclusion of What Is Questionable Within an Underlying Question	110

9	A Husserlian Response to the “Problem of/With”	125
10	Drawing Other Instructive Lessons from Our Analysis of Closure	127
	References	134
Part II Critique of Internal Difficulties and Contradictions with Objectivism
A Husserlian Critique of the Natural Attitude’s Prejudicial Effects 141
1	Introduction	141
2	The Overextension of a Causal-Explanatory Model?	145
3	Objectivism as a Pseudo-Science?	155
4	The Loss of Qualitative Foundations?	162
5	Operational Definitions to the Rescue of Quantification?	170
6	General Difficulties with Quantification	175
7	Additional Specific Difficulties with Quantification: Classification as Constitutive?	179
8	“Sticking to the Facts” as a Spurious Immediacy?	182
9	Misunderstanding the Subject of (Inter)subjectivity	190
10	The Displacement of Cultural Realities	200
11	Contradictions Arising from Objectivism’s Subject/Object Dichotomy	209
12	Difficulties and Contradictions with Naturalistic Presuppositions	213
	References	234
Some Constructive Implications of Our Husserlian Critique of Naturalistic Objectivism 237
1	Introduction	237
1.1	Opening the Door to Intentional Analysis	237
1.2	Intentional Analysis of the Negation of Communicative Possibilities	246
1.3	Intentional Analysis of Hate Speech as a Limit Case	248
1.4	Analysis of “Sense Constitution” Through Temporal Synthesis and Passive Association	249
1.5	Towards a Phenomenological Cultural Psychology of Hate Crime as Experienced as a Distinctly Qualitative Social Science	252
1.6	Recognising the Centrality of Interpretations and Acts of Interpreting	260
1.7	The Neutralisation of Prejudice	263
1.8	Recovering a Sense of the Intersubjective Life-World as an Experiential Source and Resource	265
1.9	Defining Our Life-World	265
1.10	The Primacy of the Life-World	268

Contents	ix
1.11 Life-World and Home and Alienworld Tensions	270
1.12 The Importance and Place of Life-World Analysis	272
1.13 Recovering the Life-World as Cultural Renewal	274
1.14 The Life-Worldly Embodiment of Our Lived Bodies	276
2 Conclusion.	278
References	279
Summary and Conclusion	281
References	285